Sagathriller!

Some readers feast on the triumph and tragedy of a family saga. Others prefer the sheer suspense of a thriller. Enjoy both as a heroic Mountie in remote Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, narrates events bringing all that she loves – and hates - to the verge of extinction.

SYNOPSIS

Constable Fundy Sutherland is a buff, gruff Mountie with a price on her head and a veritable ossuary of skeletons in her closet. A former JTF-2 sniper, Fundy is quietly raising daughter Skye in Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia when three events upend her careful obscurity: Skye brings home a DNA ancestry kit; the doppelgänger of Fundy's runaway mother settles in tiny White Point; and an erratic Venezuelan ship passes through the Cabot Strait.

As local disturbances and international tensions escalate around a NATO conference in Halifax, Fundy must leave her safe lane and resurrect an implacable past. Generational love story meets geopolitical suspense in a SAGATHRILLER barreling across the North Atlantic.

TALKING POINTS

Setting as protagonist: remote Cape Breton
Life of the rural Mountie
Perils of the North Atlantic
The legacy of a sadistic mother

PRAISE

"Weber's novel is populated with colorful, sharply drawn characters—especially Fundy, a no-nonsense cop who describes herself as 'like Dudley Do-Right and Sergeant Preston of the Yukon, but instead of a horse, I ride a Taurus. And I wear a bra.' A crime drama that offers a winning combination of thrills, defeats, and hard-earned victories." —Kirkus

"Janice Weber is a national treasure. A dazzling concert pianist, a superb novelist, with a stinging wit to make Dorothy Thompson weep, she is the epitome of what the all-American woman of the 21st century should be. In MEAT COVE, she brings the far reaches of Nova Scotia's Cape Breton Island roaringly alive with a tale of infidelity, bastardy, booze, concealed identity, and literally toxic femininity, and that's just Chapter One. So pour yourself a stiff one, throw another log on the fire, and settle back for a bloody good time." —Michael Walsh, author of And All the Saints, The Devil's Pleasure Palace and Last Stands

AUTHOR BIO

A native of New Jersey, Janice Weber made her recital debut at age nine and has since performed at Carnegie Hall, the White House, and Tanglewood. Her eclectic recordings range from Rachmaninoff to Messaien and she has reached audiences across the US, Europe, and China as piano soloist and chamber musician. Her writing career has followed a similar trajectory, beginning early and producing nine novels praised for their wit, verbal virtuosity, and emotional impact. Twisting plots and offbeat characters are a hallmark of Weber's works, which have been optioned for film and enjoy a worldwide following. She currently divides her time between fishing villages in Massachusetts and Cape Breton, Nova Scotia.
